

Did you know?

Despite global financial uncertainty, many people are still planning to spend on travel in 2023.

A recent survey from Booking.com found that 73 percent of respondents were more optimistic about travel than they were in 2022. The survey also studied why people are looking to travel, and the most popular type of vacation was a nostalgic getaway, which 88 percent of travelers planned to take in 2023.

That's likely due to people looking back to the days before the COVID-19 pandemic with a strong sense of appreciation.

Individuals also seem to see travel through a somewhat therapeutic lens, as 42 percent of survey respondents indicated they want a break that focuses on their mental and physical health.
